How to Survive Gold Mining in the Wild West

DO: Dig into the ground with a pickaxe.
DON'T: Dig into your friendly injun helper with a pickaxe.

DO: Buy one of the very first pairs of riveted jeans made by Samuel Levy.
DON'T: Attempt to forcibly baptize Samuel Levy in the raging Colorado River.

DO: Wash your pot in the river before cooking with it.
DON'T: Wash your pot in the river before smoking it.

DO: Carve an elaborate system of tunnels as you burrow deeper into the mines.
DON'T: Create a race of underground mole people to carry out your nefarious bidding—trust us, it can only end badly.

DO: Barter gold for food with the friendly natives.
DON'T: Buy used electronics from the friendly natives, even if they are 50% off.

DO: Play the banjo around the campfire after a hard day's work in the mines.
DON'T: Play the banjo while held above the campfire in a round of sudden-death American Idol.
